

PhotoClaim is a Berlin-based startup that supports photographers in their fight against image theft. In the age of the Internet, it has sadly become quite common for companies to rather steal photos than paying for them.

We believe:

Photography is an art form that deserves to be rewarded!
We help photographers to have their rights respected with not much effort from their side.

PhotoClaim GmbH
Ernststraße 4
13509 Berlin - Germany

VAT-ID: DE302208213

How we help photographers:

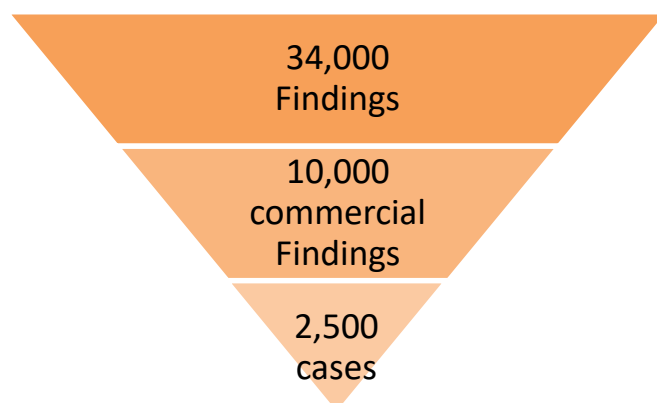

- We monitor your portfolio online by hand
- We secure all necessary evidence of infringements
- With PhotoClaim as the central contact, our photographers have access to a solid and experienced international network of lawyers
- We advance all eventual process costs

We provide full service for:

- Professional photographers
- Photographers wishing to become professionals
- Photographers sick of stock photography

The „legal way“ is the only way!

- No punitive damages exist in European courts (unlike in American courts), so the companies feel they are better off stealing
- Following the “legal way” means the companies that respect you, will understand you
- The European Court delivered a verdict in July 2016, in which the dissuasive effect of the process costs borne by the opponent are pointed out, thereby underlining the opinion and philosophy of PhotoClaim.

Founder and CEO Nico Trinkhaus and his experiences with copyright infringements.

PhotoClaim filters the findings by hand, aiming to focus exclusively on promising results, where a commercial usage took place – saving about 90% of our customer’s time. Only PhotoClaim offers this level of service!
